

A Brief Word

This lectionary provides a two year program for systematically reading through the Scriptures. Over the course of the two year cycle, the Old Testament will be read through once and the New Testament, Psalms, and Proverbs will be read through twice. In addition, seasonal readings are provided for each weekly Sabbath, following the traditional church calendar. Hopefully these seasonal readings will both spark more godly interest in lesser observed seasons (e.g., Epiphany, Trinity) and also provide more biblically informed worship during the commonly celebrated seasons (e.g., Advent, Easter). Of course, use of this lectionary is entirely voluntary and the main objective of it remains growth in biblical understanding.

Practical Suggestions for Use

Though equally useful for individuals and families, this lectionary aims to help families grow in God's Word. As such, heads of households might find the following suggestions helpful in family worship time. First, one (or both) of the daily readings should not only be read but also briefly explained and practically applied. This helps instruct the family in how to read the Bible, provides an opportunity to ask and answer questions provoked by the text, and establishes the daily habit of the head of household leading his family. Second, the family should respond to the reading and exposition of the Word by praying back the substance of the reading. For example, if the family reads Genesis 1, the family might offer a prayer to God praising Him for His glorious creation, thanking Him for the weekly pattern of six days of work and one of sanctified rest, and asking the Lord to open their eyes further to the practical lessons contained in the creation account.

Finally, families are encouraged to make use of the seasonal hymns in the Cantus Christi psalter. Seasonal hymns can be found in Section II (see title page for further divisions).

A Polemical Rationale

Creating a lectionary with seasonal readings, however, beg certain questions about whether we are secretly imposing a "tradition" at the level of Scripture. We want no part in what past saints called "will worship" (an autonomous, unbiblical form of irreverent worship), and we certainly do not want to return to the life-robbing shackles of Rome. But precisely because this is the case, we must learn what the Bible says about our days, weeks, seasons, and years and find out how this transforms our view of them. Thursday (Thor's day—as in the Norse god Thor) is not a fitting name for the fifth day of Creation. Christmas, on the other hand, makes biblical sense to mark off on our calendar each year.

The only alternative, then, is which tradition: we necessarily operate in a tradition, the question is whether it has a biblical basis and submits entirely to Scripture. As for our frequently pagan (and boring) names for the passage of time, we can look forward to a future when people scoff at the wimpiness of Thor's day in comparison to the day in which the Almighty created all that flies and swims. We can at least be thankful that our weeks are still seven days long, but we cannot deny that our weeks are seven days for a reason.

Furthermore, the Scriptures are not silent in the matter of reverently naming and commemorating the passage of time. In Colossians 2:15-19 we find instruction to this end. Briefly stated, through the Cross Christ has triumphed over worldly principalities (Thor included) and bare rituals. And by this triumph, Jesus Christ has forever linked the shadows of the Old covenant (e.g., food regulations, the feast days, the many sabbaths) to the substance of Himself. We neglect the implications of this, however, if we deny the physical realities of the spiritual reality. For example, Reformed orthodoxy rightly asserts the implications of the Old covenant shadow of the sabbaths culminating in our physical celebration and rest on the Christian sabbath—Sunday. We do not deny that the shadow of the Old covenant finds its substance in Christ, and likewise we do not deny that this fulfillment has a physical and temporal dimension for us in the New covenant. But this puts Reformed orthodoxy to the test: Though the celebration and commemoration of the Old covenant sabbaths have been established in our worship of God, we have not made full sense of the other shadows in our worship. What shall we do?

The proposed answer of this lectionary lies in establishing a Church calendar (keeping in mind past abuses and misuses) that makes sense of the Old covenant shadows with Christ as the substance. This has a number of practical benefits such as training people to see the shadow of Christ in the Old covenant, implicitly allowing the Scriptures to teach typology, and acquainting the people of God with Old Testament prophecies fulfilled in the New, not to mention providing the first baby steps toward defining a Church calendar.

So far as it is found to be biblical (and much of it is, despite the past abuses), the historic church calendar has been adopted and modified for this purpose; thus, fitting seasonal readings that correspond to the seasons of Advent, Epiphany, Lent, Easter, and Trinity have been supplied for every sabbath in addition to the daily readings. Heads of households can decide whether to use or ignore these readings without losing the benefit of the daily consecutive readings. Those desiring to utilize the seasonal readings will find a brief description of the season, its biblical basis, and some practical remarks linked to the lectionary. Those desiring a far more robust observance of a church calendar will probably be disappointed; yet they should keep in mind the need to tackle the question of a Church calendar over the course of generations. We should not, in other words, be hasty to name the passage of time definitively unless we find deep Scriptural reasons to do so. With the same care, though, we can echo the words of Abraham Kuyper: "There is not a square inch in the whole of domain of our human existence over which Christ, who is sovereign over all, does not cry 'Mine!'"
